Please list the details of the source(s) of your ideas
(e.g. book title/author, photographer's name, web address - not Google!)

I created it in my mind.

List the materials and tools used in completing your project:

The colors I used were: light blue, light brown, dark brown, yellow, gray, very light orange, light green, dark/metallic gray - my pencil, light red, ruler, rubber, dark red, ink pen D.9.

Describe the step-by-step procedures used to complete your project:

Then I drew a man going to work holding his briefcase in his left hand. Then I drew a man waiting for his bus to come. I drew the man going to work trips and all his paper work is everywhere. Then I drew the man waiting for his bus standing up and instead of going to the bus, he goes to help the man. Then I drew the man going to work, thanking the other guy for helping him pick up his paper work. I drew a little tree behind both of them for decoration and drew some clouds too. I put numbers in each of the boxes so the story is easy to follow.

A man is going to work, then he trips on a little rock. A man is waiting for his bus. Then he sees the other man trip his bus is in front of him, but instead of going to the bus he decides to go and help the other man. He helps the man pick up his paperwork and anything that dropped out of his briefcase. They picked everything up very fast. Then the man going to work thanks the other man for helping him pick up his paperwork and they do a hi-five and become best friends. This is what kindness looks like.
