

THE GOOD SAMARITAN

A Jewish man was traveling from Jerusalem down to Jericho, and he was attacked by bandits. They stripped and beat him up, and they left him half dead beside the road. By chance, a priest came along.

“Help me, please! I was attacked by bandits and I don’t know where to go!” said the Jewish man. But when the priest saw the Jewish man, he crossed the other side of the road and passed him by.

Another man who worked in the temple, who was called the Levite, walked over and looked at the Jewish man.

“Help me, please!” said the Jewish man, but the Levite also passed by on the other side of the road.

Then a Samaritan came along. Samaritans were hated by Jews. They were seen as lesser people and Jews would not interact with it. But when the Samaritan saw the man, he felt compassion for him.

“Are you Ok.? Let me help you,” said the Samaritan. The Samaritan soothed the wounds with olive oil and wine, and bandaged them. Then he put the man to his donkey, and took him to a hotel, where he took care of him.

The next day, the Samaritan took out enough money so the man could stay at the hotel until he was well enough to leave. He paid the man at the front desk and asked him to take care of the man. "I must travel on business today, take this money and pay for everything he needs until I get back," said the Samaritan man to the owner of the hotel.

The Jewish man said to the Samaritan, "How can I thank you enough?"

"I'll see you in a few days," said the Samaritan while smiling.

When the Jewish man was alone, he said, "I ask God, 'Where are my neighbours when I need them?' and He has given me the answer."

The Samaritan did as he promise. A few days later, he took the Jewish man back to Jerusalem and the Jewish man looked good.