Enter Devora and Grandma

Grandma: Hello Devora.....it's good to see you again.

Devora: Hello Grandma – you are a great “Zoomer”....

Grandma: Thank you Devora.....now I've just come off the phone from your mother and she is not very happy.

Devora: Oh dear.....what has my sister done?

Grandma: I don't think it is what your sister has done Devora. Maybe you can solve the mystery of the missing cooking chocolate?

Devora: But I'm not a detective Grandma.

Grandma: Very funny Devora. Now your mother needs that cooking chocolate for a cake she is making for Mrs Evans, who has just come out of hospital. Do you know anything about it?

Devora: Why would I know anything about it Grandma?

Grandma: Because you are someone who rather likes chocolate.

Devora: I do Grandma. It is delicious, especially cooking chocolate.

Grandma: Okay, so you do know something about it?

Devora: Well put like that, maybe I do, maybe I don't.

Grandma: Come on Devora.....spit it out.....

Devora: I can't Grandma. I have eaten it!

Grandma: So why did you lie to me and to your mother Devora?

Devora: It was only a "little white lie" Grandma!

Grandma: There isn't such a thing as a "little white lie" Devora.

Devora: But Bertie said white lies are ok especially if you cross your fingers behind your back.

Grandma: Well Bertie is not telling you the truth Devora.

Devora: Oh.....

Grandma: You see Devora, you are either telling the truth about something or you are telling a lie – it is as simple as that.

Devora: Alright Grandma

Grandma: And while we are talking about your mother being cross, I gather the Vicar has spoken to her about his raspberries.

Devora: His raspberries?

Grandma: Someone has been going into his garden and helping themselves to his prize raspberries and they have nearly all gone.

Devora: What a shame.

Grandma: I thought that too. I wonder why the Vicar rang up your mother to talk about this.

Devora: I wonder too.

Grandma: Your mother did tell me that you have suddenly got into exercising.....long walks I hear.

Devora: Oh yes Grandma.....I love my walks.

Grandma: That is very surprising for a boy who normally won't walk anywhere and makes a fuss when they can't be driven around.

Devora: So, would you like to see what I did at Sunday school this week Grandma?

Grandma: Don't change the subject Devora. Apparently, the Vicar's neighbour saw a small boy coming out of the Vicarage garden last night wearing a red and green stripey t-shirt.

Devora: That's fake news Grandma.

Grandma: Fake news?

Devora: Yes, fake news. I wouldn't take any notice of that.

Grandma: Devora.....enough of this fake news nonsense. I want you to be honest with me now. Have you been helping yourself to the Vicar's raspberries?

Devora: Er....well....

Grandma: So....it is either yes or no Devora. I don't want any white lies, fingers crossed behind your back or fake news.....I simply want the truth.

Devora: I did take the raspberries Grandma and I am feeling rather bad about it.

Grandma: Thank you for telling me the truth. Now you know that taking the Vicar's raspberries is wrong, don't you?

Devora: I do Grandma....I just couldn't resist them.

Grandma: Well we had better go round and ask the Vicar to forgive you for doing that.

Devora: Alright Grandma.

Grandma: But what I really want you to learn from our little chat today is that lying is never the right thing for a Jesus follower to do. Jesus wants us to be people of truth, like He is.

Devora: I'll try to be truthful Grandma

Grandma: Well done Devora. You know that lying really spoils your relationships. It didn't feel very nice when you were lying to me earlier....and it has made your mother very upset.

Devora: I'm sorry Grandma.....I love you and my mum very much.

Grandma: And I love you too Devora.....now go and get yourself ready, and we'll make a quick visit to the Vicar's.

Devora: Thank you Grandma.....just one thing before we go. Mum said to me earlier that Mr Long down the road has suggested that she send me to boarding school.

Grandma: Really?

Devora: Yes Grandma and that's not fake news!
