This scene was framed from Naisosa Road, near the Nadi airport runway.

On the way to youth fellowship that evening, a child saw clouds rising from the building of airport, like the plumes of smoke from a train engine. I really liked that association. The Localizer (LOC) for Instrument Landing System with the clouds, make me want to draw it.

List the materials and tools used in completing your project:

Kent paper

Eraser, pencil

Describe the step-by-step procedures used to complete your project:

First of all, my choice of tools was limited, so I prepared for the rest of the drawing process.

Kent paper, as you see, smooth. It seems that the common printer paper is more suitable for coloured pencils.

Coloured pencils, from the supermarket, had a high wax content, making layering difficult. The initial colours were light, and later polished.

The drawing process I really like the scene and idea, so I quickly sketched it with pencil, then erased the lines and laid down the base colours with mostly purple, blue, orange, and green. Next, I conceived the overall direction of warm and cool light and shadow, then added colours to the darker areas, filled colours in lighter areas. Basically, just continuously layering colours. (Light areas use darker colour first, then lighter colours, and dark areas were lighter, then deep into it.)

Finally, although the result looks like a child's drawing, the colouring is quite not satisfactory. I spent much more time using colors than I expected; it feels like conducting an experiment.
