

Title: In Whittier's Light

A voice of conscience, calm yet strong,
He wove his faith through humble song.
Against the chains, his words took flight,
A Quaker's pen, a beacon bright.

Through fields of snow and autumn flame,
He sang of mercy, not of fame.
The barefoot boy, the farmer's hand,
He honored toil across the land.

God's Word his compass, truth his guide,
He stood where justice must abide.
In verse he sowed the seeds of peace,
Those hearts might find their sweet release.

O Whittier, still your spirit calls,
Through quiet woods, through hallowed halls.
Your poems whisper, pure and clear,
A timeless faith we hold most dear.

By: John Greenleaf Whittier