It was the day of the big Presentation for Poppy; looking out of the crowd behind the curtains, Poppy could feel her hand gripping on the curtain a bit too tight. "...That's a lot of people." She muttered out, taking a step back from the curtains. While she was stuck in her own thoughts of doubt; someone calls out her name from the back, "Heyyy Poppy!" Startled from the familiar voice, Poppy turned around to see Daniel, "Oh uh- Hi Dan." She mumbled. Daniel looked at his friend with slight worry, "...You good, Poppy?" Without a beat, Poppy couldn't handle keeping it to herself, "Yes, well no- To be honest, I can't help, but feel really nervous.. And thinking about it, makes me think that I might not be able to even do this presentation." Daniel muttered her name softly feeling bad for her, until a thought came to him to encourage her, making him ramble a bit too much, which made Poppy confused on what he was talking about. Seeing Poppy's expression, Daniel stops himself and says, "What I'm trying to say is - Don't let consume you, if you haven't even done it yet." Feeling lighter, Poppy smiles, "Thanks Dan. I feel better now."
