Music is a very large part of my life, and I feel a strong connection to it. I like the treble clef's form; how it stands in the midst of the lines of the measure. I purposely set the clef on the side; I didn't want it in the centre of the paper. I think it symbolizes the fact that even though the treble clef is a vital part of sheet music, it's never the "main character". In my art, though it's not in the middle, it's the thing you look at. It gets to be the "main character".
