

FAINT YET PURSUING

Be brave, dear friend! God still has use for you,
Though head no longer wears its old- time hue;
Though strength grows feeble, and though sight may dim,
Thou hast a purpose and a place with Him.

Be brave, dear friend! Nor 'neath the willow lie,
Nor 'neath the juniper request to die;
Let not thy courage nor thy strength go down,
Perchance for thee there waits a warrior's crown.

Faint not nor fear! Thou still hast work to do,
Some noble task to finish or pursue;
Not till He calls to Heaven's sublime abode
Darest thou think to leave the pilgrim road.

Well, noble friend, be brave, be strong, be true!
Not yet is God's commission filled for you;
But, when shall come the end of life's long race,
How rich the welcome then to thine own place!

J. Danson Smith