

The Peace He Gave

Thoughts guide me where I can't be aware
With false understanding, I fall into despair
The cave of misery is dark, pathless, and unending
My sorrowful heart should deserve such suffering

With a mind lost in blinding light a heart as heavy as the endless night and a soul as broken as shattered glass
I slowly fade, letting time through and pass

Burdens fill my thoughts with dark oppression
But Your suffering brought healing, life, redemption
You took on the cross for people so helpless
As we all thought You were purely worthless

If only they knew Your sacrifice was crucial, Your love would be eternal
The tears You cried withheld the endless tears I could've cried at my funeral
So I know to rejoice beneath your covering
For with you, time stands still. My peace came through your suffering
