

forget her own child – I will not forget you. I have carved you in the palm of my hand.”

Today millions of unborn children are being killed. And we say nothing. For it was that unborn child that recognized the presence of Jesus when Mary came to visit Elizabeth, her cousin. As we read in the Gospel, the moment Mary came into the house, the little one in the womb of his mother leaped with joy. And so today, let us here make a strong resolution. We are going to save every unborn child, give them a chance to be born. And in doing so, we are fighting abortion by adoption.

The good God has blessed the work so beautifully that we have saved thousands of children and they have found a home where they are loved, wanted, and cared. We have brought so much joy in the homes that there was not a child. And I think with God’s grace we will be able to bring peace in the world.

Love begins at home. I never forget a little child who taught me a very beautiful lesson. They heard in Calcutta, that Mother Theresa had no sugar for her children. And this little one Hindu boy, four years old, went home and told his parents: “I will not eat sugar for three days. I will give my sugar to Mother Theresa. After three days, they brought into our house. And this is what I bring before you, to love one another until it hurts.

One evening, a gentleman came to our house and said, “there is a Hindu family and the eight children had not eaten for a long time. I took rice and went immediately. And there was this mother with those little ones faces’ shining eyes from sheer hunger. She took the rice from my hand, divided into two and went out. When she came back, I asked her, “where did you go? What did you do?” And one answer she gave me, “they are hungry also.” What surprised me most not that she gave the rice but that in her suffering, she knew that somebody else was hungry and she had the courage to share. This is what I mean. I want you to love and never turn your back to the poor, for in turning your back to the poor, you are turning it to Christ.

forget her own child – I will not forget you. I have carved you in the palm of my hand.”

Today millions of unborn children are being killed. And we say nothing. For it was that unborn child that recognized the presence of Jesus when Mary came to visit Elizabeth, her cousin. As we read in the Gospel, the moment Mary came into the house, the little one in the womb of his mother leaped with joy. And so today, let us here make a strong resolution. We are going to save every unborn child, give them a chance to be born. And in doing so, we are fighting abortion by adoption.

The good God has blessed the work so beautifully that we have saved thousands of children and they have found a home where they are loved, wanted, and cared. We have brought so much joy in the homes that there was not a child. And I think with God's grace we will be able to bring peace in the world.

Love begins at home. I never forget a little child who taught me a very beautiful lesson. They heard in Calcutta, that Mother Theresa had no sugar for her children. And this little one Hindu boy, four years old, went home and told his parents: “I will not eat sugar for three days. I will give my sugar to Mother Theresa. After three days, they brought into our house. And this is what I bring before you, to love one another until it hurts.

One evening, a gentleman came to our house and said, “there is a Hindu family and the eight children had not eaten for a long time. I took rice and went immediately. And there was this mother with those little ones’ shining eyes from sheer hunger. She took the rice from my hand, divided into two and went out. When she came back, I asked her, “where did you go? What did you do?” And one answer she gave me, “they are hungry also.” What surprised me most not that she gave the rice but that in her suffering, she knew that somebody else was hungry and she had the courage to share. This is what I mean. I want you to love and never turn your back to the poor, for in turning your back to the poor,

And so my prayer for you is that, truth will bring prayer in our homes, that in the poor it is Christ. And we will love naturally. We will try to do something. First, in our own home, next door neighbor, in the country we live, or in the whole world. God bless you!