

Enough for Today

God, tomorrow still scares me.

I keep wondering what my future will be.

Will my family be okay?

Will I be strong enough to face what comes next?

I've watched my parents carry burdens

Far heavier than I could ever understand.

As the oldest brother, I tried to stand strong,

Even when fear quietly filled my heart.

So I fold my hands and pray.

Before I can finish my words,

Tears fall onto my folded hands,

Yet You already know every fear I carry.

You never promised that tomorrow would be easy.

You never told me every answer I wanted.

Instead, You reminded me that You are already there,

Waiting for me before tomorrow even begins.

Thank You for hearing the prayers

I could never say out loud.

Thank You for staying beside me

Even when I questioned Your plan.

Now I still don't know what tomorrow holds,

But I know You will already be there.

So I will walk one step at a time,

With Jesus, and without fear walking alone.
