

The Cross and Country's Call

Upon a hill the Savior died,
With mercy in His eyes;
He bore the weight of all our sin
Beneath the darkened skies.

The stone was rolled, the tomb was bare,
The dawn broke bright and clear;
The risen Christ brought living hope
To every heart sincere.

The Gospel crossed the seas and lands,
Through valleys, storms, and flame;
Its message reached both rich and poor,
Exalting Jesus' name.

Our fathers walked through many trials,
With courage, faith, and prayer;
They built with hope a better home
And taught God's truth with care.

A nation's strength is not in swords,
Nor riches stored away;
But in hearts that seek the Lord above
And walk His righteous way.

Until the King returns in might
To reign forevermore,
We'll sing His grace from shore to shore,
As countless saints have done before.
