

“Nail-Scar Flow”

Yeah—

Born in a manger but He came like a boss,
Carried the weight of the world on a cross.
Crown full of thorns, yeah, bloodline drip,
King with the scars, no counterfeit script.

Walked on water, told storms “Sit down,”
Flipped whole temples, shook that town.
Spoke one word, demons dipped,
Death tried to hold Him—lost its grip.

They thought it was over when the stone sealed tight,
Three days dark, then BOOM—new light.
Grave got cracked like a beat in the booth,
Rose up—resurrected Truth.

Nails in His hands but He still reached out,
Turned fear to faith, turned pain to clout.
From the tomb to the throne—yeah, that’s the proof:
Love came back... bulletproof.