True Beauty

By: Leslie Ludy

The only true beauty comes from a life, fully surrendered to Jesus Christ. Where your self has died, has gotten out of the way and He can be seen in and through you. John the Baptist said, "I must decrease, so that He might increase." If we're on the way, if we're pursuing the things we want to pursue, living the life we want to live, than His beauty will not be seen in and through us, and we may have a life that looks a little bit cleaner, a little bit more moral, than the girls all around us, but we won't have the essence of the true Gospel Life, which is becoming a living sacrifice for our King.

Nothing that we have is our own anymore, we don't have time of our own, money of our own, resources of our own, plans of our own, it's now all about Him, it's not about us. When we grow up in Christianity over here, a lot of times, we hear about how we're beautiful, and we have all this value, and worth as women and because we live in a culture that just bombards us with messages of insecurity, so this message of you're not good enough, you're not pretty enough, you don't have the right figures, constantly in our face, and so the Christian community has come in saying no, no, no, you're good enough, you're beautiful just the way you are, but the danger of that message is that it often promotes self-esteem and we're looking within ourselves, trying to find our value, our beauty, and our worth, but we're valuable to Jesus Christ before we're redeemed, but we really won't have any true beauty until He transforms us from the inside-out.

I see a lot of girls, all of our free time goes to facebook, texting with friend, watching movies, watching tv's, obsessing over guys, trying to figure out what we're going to wear, going to the mall, frittering our life away on these meaningless things, meanwhile there are Christians on the other side of the world, literally giving up their very lives for Jesus Christ, so I want to challenge you, that what we see and maybe even the version of Christianity that we've grown up with, that God is calling us to more than this, Christ said that, whoever of you does not forsake all that He has, cannot be my disciple.

Its not just saying a sinner's prayer, its not just acknowledging that Christ died for us, its not just saying, oh this is really great, now I can go to Heaven at the end of the road, this is about giving up our life, its about a covenant exchange with Him, its about forsaking all that we have.

When we come to Him, do we realize that, we can't hold on to our life, we have to take up our cross and follow Him, we have to become a living sacrifice, we have to let Him have everything. It's a life of full surrender, and He said, "Whoever does not take up his cross and follow after Me, is not worthy of Me." Are those just nice sounding words, taking up our cross, is it just some sort of visual thing in our mind? I think it was, for me, for many years, I didn't understand what it really meant, There's just like, oh its nice, take up your cross and follow Him, but what is He asking of us? He gave everything, will we give everything to Him?
