

Jack and The Holy Bible.

The day wasn't too nice; a lot of things weren't going well for someone, someone who isn't mentally and physically well, someone who has lost it all. Jack a lonely hopeless individual who has lots of struggles in the past till now, he was hit with a bunch of tragedies that left scars in his heart (mentally and possibly physically), such as when his dog died, when his childhood home was taken away, when he was bullied by alot of people, the time his friends and best friends outcasted him. It was not going so well with him; he kept on overthinking the times when he failed as a son, a friend, a lot was going through his head. He thought about a lot on the idea of not existing and committing the sin (as in) suicide.

He struggled with all these thoughts, then he decided to go to a restaurant. There, he met someone who usually goes to a church nearby; the individual that Jack met was named Robert. Robert introduced himself to Jack. Jack said, "Hey, Robert, you know how I've been doing, right?" Then Robert replied, "Yes, I can tell, you seem very tired and hit with much burden." Jack responds, "Yeah... I've never gotten much sleep ever since those accidents. I may or may have done...Then Robert responded by giving Jack a Bible and telling him to keep it and read it when he has time. Jack was slightly puzzled and confused, but he reluctantly kept it to see what it was about. At his apartment, Jack pondered whether or not he should actually read it (even though he was told to do so), but Jack decided to read the Bible anyway. He found a lot of inspiring things that can help with his struggles in certain verses, such as Galatians 6:9, which reads

"Let us not become weary in doing good, for at the proper time we will reap a harvest if we do not give up". It inspired Jack to the core and the heart, making him more faithful and hopeful.

As well as Joshua 1:9: "Be strong and courageous. Do not be frightened... for the Lord your God is with you wherever you go." Jack, in his head, was doubting whether God could help or not. He views the Bible as a possible way out of the eternal purgatory of his struggles. However, he still doubts it due to him having lost hopes on many things in his life, for example, his friendship with someone turned into a bully, his thinking he would be with his dog forever, the dread that he may or may not be here with anyone for so long due to his mental health spiraling into an abyss. It is obvious that he sees the Bible as a way of escape from the eternal purgatory of struggles and shame, but at the same time, he doubts that simple words on a mere book would fix his mistakes in a night or two. Understanding the Bible more, he started to think more positively and effectively make him more productive, more hopeful, and more faithful. He went from a hopeless individual to a very hopeful individual. At the end, he finally lets go of his past and moves forward through life with a more faithful, good-hearted, hopeful, positive mind and a big smile on his face.

After all the motivational feels, he went to the same restaurant that he and Robert had talked in. He goes into the restaurant, meets with Robert (coincidentally), then waves at Robert. He talks to Robert again, saying, " Hey, this Bible thing is very great and nice, it helped me a lot with all the struggles!" As Jack exclaims to Robert, Robert replied, "Glad it worked out for you. In the meantime, you should totally come around to the Church, which is just a few blocks ahead." Jack responds with a slight nod and says, "Sure, maybe if I get time." Robert replied with a thumbs-up and left. Jack was thinking about whether he should come to the Church, but reluctantly, he went to it. Upon entering the Church, he was greeted by Robert, and they both joined the worship. They followed along with the worship of God and heard all of the motivational, spiritual, hopeful speeches and sermons in the Church. After the worshipping ceremony (or as it's called, I think), Jack was blown away by the experience and felt way more free. He went out of the church and walked straight back to his apartment, but he saw someone; it was his bullies who bullied him during high school.

Jack was a bit timid, but he didn't back down and confront the bully. The bully, named James, was surprised to see Jack and was about to walk away, but he was still confronted, and then they exchanged a chat. Jack forgives James and tells him that, yes, James can change, and it's not too late to change because, after all, anyone can change for the better. James was crying a little bit, begging for forgiveness and wanting to repent his faults. And Jack accepted the apology and thanked James for the little chat they had.

Jack finally went back to his apartment feeling more free and hopeful, he had never felt this ever since middle grade and that's a lot because at the end of the day he just wanted to be free of his chains, chains that put him under a curse that being all of his tragedies and the one who lifted Jack out of the curse was God himself. Jack was feeling very refreshed after all of those very hopeful and spiritual things happening to him; he decided to spread the Gospel to those who are lost without a purpose. Thus, starting a lot of hopeful messages of the Gospel to people who are like him and his experiences of struggles, Jack talked and talked again with strangers and people who are struggling as badly or worse than Jack; he was quite literally spreading the words of God to others alike to him. By spreading the Gospel, he got more friends and connections to people he wouldn't expect to be friends with. It was a nice and satisfying thing he has done, and it paid off very well.
